How to grow tomatoes / RHS Gardening

Sow in small pots filled with seed compost, then either place in a propagator or cover each pot with a clear plastic bag and place on a bright windowsill. The young seedlings need to be kept at around 18°C (64°F). Transplant into 9cm (3½in) pots when two true leaves have formed.

Waterlogging and flooding / RHS Gardening

Waterlogging and flooding Few garden plants will survive waterlogging or flooding. Prolonged periods of sitting in soil saturated with water reduces the oxygen available to the roots and causes yellow leaves, root rot and death. However, conditions can be improved using various techniques to promote drainage and prevent damage.

How to grow peas / RHS Gardening

Still, peas generally prefer cooler weather and grow well in a cool spring. Make a flat-bottomed trench 5cm (2in) deep and 15cm (6in) wide - a draw hoe is ideal for this. Sow the seeds evenly in the trench about 7.5cm (3in) apart, cover with soil, then lightly firm. If you sow a second row, space it at a distance equal to the height of the crop.

Rabbits / RHS Gardening

Fencing and Netting. Rabbits usually enter gardens from adjoining common land, farms or woods. Where this is the case, the erection of rabbit-proof fences and gates should be considered. Ideally fences should be of 2.5cm (1-1½in) wire mesh and 120-140cm (48-54in) in height.
